

Responsible Business for People and Planet

Gulf Sustain seeks to support the people-and-planet agendas of the six Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries.

As GCC countries continue to demonstrate efforts toward achieving net zero, greater opportunity exists to centre worker welfare as an enabler of the green transition.

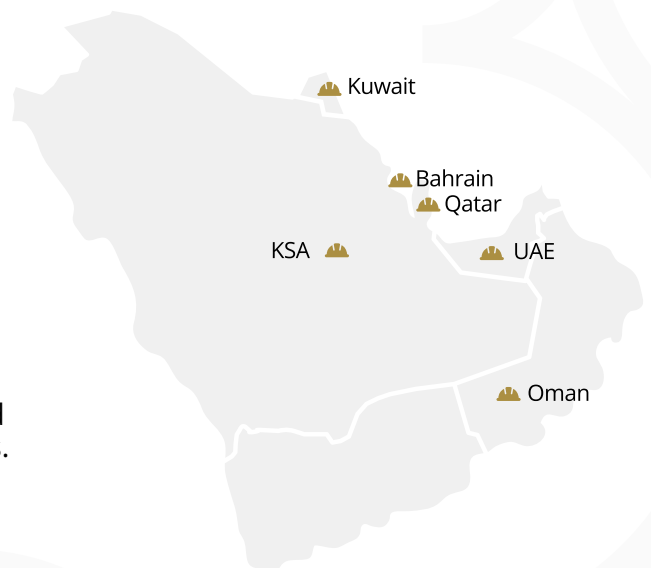

Gulf Sustain, a pioneering initiative working at the intersection of the climate and worker welfare agendas, aims to contribute to a vision of a green economy that will drive social change in the GCC and beyond.

Managed well, transitions to environmentally and socially sustainable economies can become a strong driver for job creation, improved labour protections, and economic and social equity for local and foreign workers.

Gulf Sustain aims to develop knowledge, drive dialogue, and advocate for collaboration between businesses, governments, financial actors, and local, regional and international organisations.

The initiative aims to identify and develop constructive approaches to promoting a strong worker welfare dimension into climate action decision-making spaces, by advancing responsible business practices.

(Approaches)

By influencing and convening state and non-state actors across the fields of climate action, economic diversification, and worker welfare in the GCC region, Gulf Sustain aims to contribute to the development of a green transition framework that takes into consideration the social-environmental intersection.

Gulf Sustain aims to promote an integrated approach to achieving net-zero commitments while advancing worker welfare by:

- Developing knowledge and providing thought leadership: undertaking research and building capacity on practical tools and approaches that further responsible business;
- Working across silos to drive constructive dialogue among key regional, local and international stakeholders: building trust, generating awareness, and promoting cross-sector collaboration and exchange;
- Collaboratively advocating for better policies, practice and accountability mechanisms: identifying opportunities to influence practitioners to shape locally-relevant policy, promote responsible business, and strengthen accountability for all;
- Catalysing multi-stakeholder engagement and collective action: sharing and developing locally-relevant approaches and scalable solutions to drive concrete outcomes through new incentive structures.
